REPORTED BIG RAILWAY MERGER

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—A report from Wall street of a traffic agreement between the Union Pacific and Chicago and Northwestern railway, amounting to the complete control of the latter road by the former, gained strength today in financial circles on the refusal of Marvin Hewitt, president of the Northwestern, to discuss statements made in a Wall street summary under the head of the "Harriman Properties."

The report is that the Harriman interests have absorbed the Chicago and Northwestern by the simple device of a guarantee on the stocks of the latter company.

It is pointed out in the article, which appears to be inspired, that the strategic position of the Chicago and Northwestern is such that it will not come within the meaning of the law that prohibits the merging or single control of parallel competing railways, although an extension of the Chicago and Northwestern has been carried through Nebraska and the central part of Wyoming on a parallel with the Union Pacific.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

nominated a northern man, J. B. Giffen, a prominent merchant of Manhattan. Tom Marshall had a man in view. He was all of a man and his man was Fred Bowler. Milo Davidovich had an ardent worker in the cause of Democracy, W. J. McCabe.

Mr. McCabe arose at this juncture to a question of personal privilege. He opened the ball with a reference to the late lamented Democratic state convention. He said that he was secretary of the convention and that to him had been appropriated $150 as reporter of the convention. He had asked for the support of the Tonopah delegation in the primary but was confronted with a rumor that he had misappropriated $450 of the state convention funds. He charged that there was a conspiracy to injure his character and destroy his political aspirations.

Judge DeLaney said Beatty had been conceded a candidate and his name was George Probasco.

J. H. Morris' candidate was not in the house, but he did not hesitate to say that he was all right. He nominated Cy Johnson of Round Mountain.

R. P. Dunlap also had a man who was not in the house and his name was William Merton of Manhattan.

H. R. Cooke placed in nomination a man whom he claimed was not a fourth of July orator, but was a business man of Tonopah, J. E. McNamara.

Charles Keilhofer named a staunch Democrat, D. J. Fitzgerald.

George Thatcher arose to nominate a red headed man and he was B. H. Smith.

Thatcher at this stage said that the Tonopah delegation had held a caucus Wednesday night and selected three men for the assembly and asked that another recess be taken to give them another chance to cut the cards and hold a caucus.

J. B. Lindsay was not anxious for a fight on his candidates and moved that Probasco and Kane be elected by acclamation. Dick Dunlap said that he didn't want any Christmas presents, but that he did want Merton, Giffen and Cy Johnson included with the Rhyolite men.

Boss McFadden then wanted to nominate a man and he sprung a geographically situated one. He was a Phonolite one by the name of H. G. Bruener.

Chairman Ray then dug up the motion of Lindsay on the selection of the Rhyolite men by acclamation, when Flatiron Kelly, formerly of "de fifth" in Denver, said he was a representative of the Bonanza Miners' union and Bullfrog secretary, and charged Probasco with being a member of the citizens' alliance.

Faulkner was brought to his feet and wanted to know the compact entered into between the Rhyolite faction and the Tonopah delegation, but this failed to shut off "Flatiron" and he insisted on an answer to the charges he made. While Kelly was talking a motion to elect Probasco and Kane was carried. "Flatiron" wanted a roll call but the best he got was the icy stare.

J. H. Morris wanted his candidate, Cy Johnson elected by acclamation, there was nothing doing.

H. R. Cooke filed a violent objection to the tactics pursued in the matter of eliminating candidates by the convention's rough shod work.

This brought forth rapturous applause from Jim Hayes and Scott Baldwin, who are new in politics.

Dr. Jewett shied at taking part in Tonopah's fight.

George Thatcher said there were seven candidates and Tom Marshall again talked.

NEVADA FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF TONOPAH UNITED STATES DEPOSITORY.

J. B. Giffen of Manhattan said he did not care for the nomination and he allowed his name to be brought into the campaign for the purpose of finding the strongest factor in the fight. He charged political treachery and under no consideration would he allow his name to go before the convention at which there were loud cries of "No, No."

Thatcher said that he didn't know that Manhattan had been promised two assemblymen and that the frame up must have been changed and he wanted another caucus. Joe Gori was in favor of two being allotted to Manhattan and remarked that it looked to him as if Tonopah wanted to hog the whole cheese. Tallman was in favor of two also for Manhattan. The chair then took a hand and he wanted a caucus and upon motion of Thatcher the ninth recess of fifteen minutes was taken.

Upon reassembling Smith of Lodi expressed his disapproval of the crushing out process. He seconded Bruener of Phonolite, who said was the equal of the picture on the wall, referring to William Jennings Bryan. King of Rhyolite wanted to know the result of the caucus and Falkner objected to Bruener's nomination.

Upon calls from various parts of the house for the result of the caucus, Fitzgerald with his emotions under control related how he had been thrown down and out by the gas pipe method or the result of a boomerang.

H. R. Cooke said it was disagreeable, but he would take the chance and turn back a lead in the action of the Democratic state convention. He was a delegate from Manhattan and wanted a further statement from the Tonopah delegation about McCabe's reply as to the state convention's finances and McCabe's connection therewith. He did this for the purpose of learning whether McCabe was the proper man for the office of assemblyman. McCabe then stated his side and after much rapid fire talk as to Considine's position and reference to Dunlap he made the assertion that he had been approached yesterday morning and had been offered the assemblymanship if he would knife his friend Cleve Baker. Thatcher wanted to know who the wielder of the stiletto was and cried to McCabe from various portions of the house elicited the statement that it had been Joe Gori.

A further discussion was participated in by Dunlap, Cooke, Thatcher and Keilhofer on the merits or demerits of the case and "Flatiron" Kelly bounced into the ring and called upon Senator Bell for a statement and out of the entire jangle the chair said the best way to settle the fight was to have a roll call. A discussion then arose as to the method of calling for the vote. Cooke insisting that every man should go on record. The chairman of each delegation was empowered to cast the vote of his gang. The vote for assemblymen showed Smith, 75; McNamara, 73; Giffen, 68; Merton, 61; Johnson, 61; McCabe, 37, and Bowler, 5. The chair wanted oratory, but he felt sorry for the outfit when they went to Carson as the $10 a day would hardly buy whisky for the legislators. All the nominees indorsed the platform and after spinning the assessment to the treasurer they were permitted to speak their little pieces.

When the nominations for sheriff were announced, B. H. Smith claimed the attention of the chair. He decried long drawn out speeches and placed in nomination J. J. Owens, the present popular sheriff of Nye county. Thatcher seconded the nomination in which he paid a high tribute to the present incumbent's ability. He produced facts and figures to show that the sheriff was the right man in the right place. The sheriff was elected by acclamation. Upon being called to the platform he gave his views upon the position occupied by himself and he was given an ovation in the shape of three cheers and a tiger.

Walter Cole, the young barrister, made the speech of the evening in nominating his opponent in the primaries for the office of district attorney. He declared that he was a fighter from Fightville and that he was just as good a loser from Loseville and placed in nomination Cleve Baker. Cleve was nominated by acclamation and upon delivering his speech of acceptance took occasion to thank Mr. Cole for his very generous words about him.

C. G. Smith placed Pudgy Grimes in nomination for recorder and auditor and the convention ratified C. G.'s suggestion.

For the office of county clerk James Cleary launched Walter Agnew. Henry Notsinger nominated J. H. McCann, while Billy Pittman, who up to this time had not had a chance to speak, drew tears from the eyes of the audience in his laudations of H. W. Scheld. R. P. Dunlap whooped it up for Jim Degan, and the first ballot resulted in Scheld getting 29 votes; Agnew, 27; McCann, 20; and Degan, 5. Necessary to a choice 41.

After the first ballot Degan withdrew and a second ballot resulted in Agnew receiving 30; Scheld, 26, and McCann, 22. On the third ballot Agnew got 38; Scheld, 25, and McCann, 16. Agnew copped the grapes on the next inning with 50 votes, while Scheld got 22, and McCann, 7.

"Flatiron" Kelly in a speech grandiloquent and a spicy flavor from the Old Sod, said he came up from Rhyolite for one thing only, but having received a solar plexus he laid down and would support J. J. Owens and the ticket with the hole in it. He said that for the position of county treasurer he proposed to nominate a miner and his name was Daniel H. McNeil. Commissioner Lindsay nominated C. F. Ryan of Rhyolite, but McNeil, the county clerk man, had him groggy and down and out in the first round, McNeil getting 45 votes to Ryan's 36.

C. C. Grimes was elected by acclamation to the position of county surveyor.

For public administrator, as announced in yesterday morning's Bonanza, L. L. Blumenthal was handed the honor. There being a fair sprinkling of ladies in the audience L. L. in his Chesterfieldian manner captured the feminine portion by his masterly speech of acceptance.

For the nominations for commissioner John Clendenning and James J. McQuillan were named for the long term job. J. B. Giffen played on the strings for the nomination of W. C. Humphreys of Manhattan. Tex Watson, who resembles the meek and lowly Nazarene, put up a strong talk for Clendenning, making a plea for a drawing card, but the best draw he got was a blank as McQuillan received 43 votes to Clendenning's 37. Humphreys was elected by acclamation for the short term.
